

TWO RING CIRCUS IS WELL STARTED

Tax Collectors Employed by County Treasurer Enlarge Their Museum and Menagerie.

SCORES OF COMPLAINTS FILED

Local Attorneys Beseiged with Inquiries Concerning Extent to Which Collectors Can Go.

The two ring circus, with County Treasurer John E. Belding and the Indianapolis tax collectors occupying the first, and alleged delinquent taxpayers the second ring, has been well started and is furnishing at least fifty-seven varieties of excitement for those included in the second group. Chief Collector Cosner is the ring master and at present is in the most conspicuous place in the spot light. And, that spot-light is moving to various parts of the county so that the entertainment will be witnessed in each township before the stakes are pulled and the collectors remove their tent and leave for other fields of activity.

It is said that a museum and a menagerie are being operated as side shows in connection with the big tent and that additions are being made to both each day. The museum was established here Wednesday and includes an unusual collection of pianos, chairs, tables and other articles of household furniture while the menagerie to date includes a cow and a calf. It is reported on good authority that some horses and mules will be added this week unless they are redeemed in advance by those who hold "rain checks."

In several instances the show has been "pulled off" amid a thunderous uproar of complaint, but the ringmaster was insistent that the program should be carried out as announced as no provision was made for it being "subject to change without notice." In other quarters the appearance of the chief collector with his little yellow sheet of paper, which is known as the "treasurer's delivery bond," was sufficient for admission and as soon as the money was paid the parties entered the big audience on the sidelines and watched the proceedings.

Many of those who have felt the sting of the ringmaster whip have conferred with local attorneys today to ascertain just how far the collectors can go in their campaign to collect delinquent amounts alleged to be due the county treasurer's office. Some of the attorneys have ventured the opinion point blank that the delinquent amounts can be collected even if it is necessary to confiscate the alleged delinquent's property. Others emphatically declare that the collectors are overstepping their rights in some instances and refer to the Indiana statutes to prove their point. As yet no cases have been handed to local attorneys for prosecution, but it is reported that one man intends to have the court say whether or not the collectors are clothed with the authority to take the course they have followed. One of the most current complaints is that the delivery bonds issued under the name of the county treasurer have not been properly signed and filled out and that the documents do not show that the collectors have the power to confiscate personal property.

One prominent attorney today said he had received a call from a party who had been served with one of the "last notices before the wagon calls," and on investigation had found that the party did not have any property except some household goods which were assessed for $20. He referred to the section of the Indiana statute, Indiana Acts 1897, page 171, which says that no household goods valued at less than $100 can be taken for delinquent taxes if the property owner has no other possessions. This does not include live stock, the attorney said, and the law was designed to protect persons who might lose everything they have if the tax collectors feel disposed to take it.

Tax Collector Cosner said Wednesday afternoon that the "fireworks" had just started. "We have taken some personal property today from

HEALTH IS VITAL TO SAFETY FIRST

Dr. E. M. Parlett and T. E. Stacy Emphasize this Point in Noon Meeting for B. & O. Men.

NIGHT MEETING TO BE HELD

Employees of the Indiana Division and Their Families Invited to Society Hall at 8 O'clock.

Conservation of health as well as precaution against possible injury from accident is a vital factor in the safety first movement waged by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, according to Dr. E. M. Parlett, sanitation expert in the employ of the company, who have an informal talk to about fifty employees at the freight house at 1 o'clock today. Dr. Parlett is here to assist in the safety first meeting at the Society Hall at 8 o'clock tonight.

Trainmaster Hooper arranged for a small meeting at noon and Dr. Parlett and T. E. Stacy, secretary of the B. & O. Y. M. C. A., gave addresses. Mr. Stacy operated a stereopticon machine and showed slides which emphasized the effect of drugs and alcohol upon the body. Dr. Parlett advised the employees of the company to have physical examinations made at least once a year so that any afflictions or diseases might be checked before they reached the acute stage. The value of human life was emphasized.

"This is an educational campaign," said Dr. Parlett. "Much is said about accidents, yet deaths from violent causes are a small percentage of the total. We hope to show the employees of the company the great need of conserving their health and their bodies. It is impossible to employ nurses, as other corporations do, to visit families upon demand and point out how health should be guarded, and our campaign is necessarily a long one. Loyalty and efficiency come when health is up to standard."

It was pointed out in the talk of Mr. Stacy that habit forming drugs and alcohol have a detrimental effect upon the body. The constant use of alcoholic liquors even in small quantities deaden the nerves and weakens the vitality, it was stated. An instance of the connection of the safety first movement and health was given of where a car repairman was not feeling well when he left home in the morning. Later in the day he crawled under a car. The blue signal was a short distance away but he "did not feel like walking up for it." While he was under the car another bumped into it and he lost a foot.

"While we do not advocate the laying off for trivial causes," said Dr. Parlett, "we do urge our men not to work when they are not in the best physical condition."

The talks during the noon hour served to show the nature of the meeting tonight. All employees of the Indiana division in this city and their families are urged to attend the meeting tonight. Dr. Parlett and Mr. Stacy will continue their lectures. Mayor John A. Ross, Superintendent E. W. Scheer, and R. R. Jenkins, secretary of the Chicago Junction Railroad Y. M. C. A., are also scheduled to give addresses. The stereopticon will be used and some interesting and instructive slides will be shown. A short musical program has been arranged, it is announced.

Those interested in the safety first campaign on the B. & O. system have learned from experience that frequently the wives and families of the employees are more interested in the movement than are the men themselves, and for this reason the meeting was arranged so they could be present.

The B. & O. was one of the first railroad companies to get back of the safety first movement and the campaign is now extended so it will include a wider field.

First School in Seymour Taught by Mrs. Eliza Gibson

(By J. Newt. Gibson.)

Seymour was laid out in September 1852, by the late Meedy W. Shields. The first lots sold were at a public auction, on the 11th day of November, 1852.

At that time a greater part of the land on which the best buildings of the city are now situated, was one vast pond. Where the Ebner Ice Plant now stands was a pond of water. In the block where the Interurban depot now stands there was nothing but mud and water.

The land was owned by Mr. Shields and was used as mule pasture. In fact the place was then known as "Mule Crossing," a name given it in derision by the inhabitants of surrounding territory.

Trains were then running on the Jeff road to Rockford, but no station had been established at Seymour, and no trains stopped here. The Ohio and Mississippi railroad had been located, but at that time little work had been done upon it in this county.

The first real settlement of the town began in the spring of 1853.

Travis Carter had come here from Tampico to locate, and until he could erect a home he resided in a little log cabin in the north part of the village. The cabin was later occupied by Isaac Miller and was called the "county seat."

Thomas McCollum came here in May 1853, and opened a hotel in a frame building located on the ground now occupied by the Groub Grocery Co., on Second street.

Dr. J. T. Shields completed the first residence a one-story building

MEXICANS FIRE ON AMERICAN TROOPS

Carranzista Soldiers Said to Have Made Disconcerted Attempt to Check Expedition.

NO CASUALTIES REPORTED

De Facto Government Officials Surprised at Marching Ability of the U. S. Forces.

(By United Press.)

San Antonio, April 13.—Carranzista soldiers and citizens in Parral fired on American troops when the latter marched through the city, Consul Fletcher reported to Major-General Funston today, quoting advices from Governor Gutierrez, the de facto commander at Parral. There were no casualties, according to advices.

General Gutierrez adopted a complaining attitude in his advices to Letcher. The Carranzistas had no idea the Americans were so far south, he declared, and were surprised by the marching ability of the men. The Mexican general's dispatches were interpreted to mean that the Carranzistas did not intend for the Americans to progress so far into Mexico.

140 soldiers believed to be part of Major Tompkins' command comprised the force that marched through Parral, Letcher reported. The Americans kept on marching, giving little attention to the firing. Funston flatly denounced the Carranzistas for failing to co-operate with the Americans. He pointed out that they had twice allowed Villa to slip through their lines. It was pointed out that Gutierrez held the Americans responsible for the shooting.

American Army Heads Think Positions Were Changed for the Moral Effect on Request.

(By United Press.)

Columbus, N. M., April 13 (Censored)—A high military official at the base camp here today expressed the belief that it was inadvisable for the American troops to withdraw from Mexico at present, but that if Carranza's request was not granted a break between the two governments was inevitable.

Many officers were of the opinion that Carranza's wishes will be respected and the troops withdrawn. All declared the taking up by Carranza troops of strategic positions commanding the American supply lines was significant. The officers believe the de facto troops were sent to their places for moral effect to support the request. (Belated by censor.)

AMERICAN FORCES ARE PREPARED FOR ANY MOVE

Funston Says Advance Lines Are in Danger if Supplies Should be Cut Off.

(By United Press.)

San Antonio, April 13—Prepared for any eventuality, the American forces will continue their march in their hunt for Villa until orders to discontinue the chase are received from the war department or Villa is killed or captured. This was the statement of Major-General Funston today. Funston denied the American advanced forces were in danger if their supplies were cut off. He intimated he had full confidence in the ability of the Americans to take care of themselves.

Funston has not yet received any official information of the request of withdrawal of the expedition.

NOTE TO STATE DEPARTMENT

Text of Communication is Unofficially Made Public—New Situation Presented.

(By United Press.)

Washington, April 14—The administration today faced the two big questions—Mexico and the submarine issue—at the most critical stages since either became an issue. The next moves in each case may bring on a real crisis.

Bulletin.

(By United Press.)

Washington, April 13.—In a twenty-five minute conference this afternoon Mexican Ambassador Arredondo handed Secretary Lansing Carranza's suggestion for the withdrawal of American troops from Mexican territory.

(By United Press.)

Washington, April 13—General Carranza has prepared a demand for the withdrawal of American troops in Mexico. The state department had not yet received this demand at noon today and no comment was made. In advance of the actual receipt of the demand and before the administration's policy had been formulated a high administration official hinted broadly to the United Press a doubt whether this government will meet such a demand.

Carranza's note is in the hands of the Mexican embassy here. It is in no sense an ultimatum or a demand, it was said at the embassy. It was characterized rather as a request for negotiations looking to the withdrawal of troops. Long correspondence is believed inevitable and in the meantime the chase of Villa will be conducted with utmost energy.

"The first chief of the Constitutionalists' army charged with the executive power of the nation considers it is already time to treat with the United States government for the withdrawal of their forces from our territory," says a communication from Carranza's secretary of state to Secretary Lansing, according to the unofficial text received today.

The administration was suddenly brought face to face with what may prove the most serious situation of the pursuit of Pancho Villa.

Declaring the crossing of the Mexican border has never been formally agreed to by the Carranza government the note makes this declaration the most important of the communications received.

"The Mexican government judges it convenient to suspend for the present all discussions of negotiations in this particular," says the note. "Dis-occupation," of Mexico is asked on the ground that Villa's band has been dispersed and Carranza forces are able to complete the task of extermination.

FUNSTON DESIRES DEATH TO CAPTURE OF BANDIT

Attitude Towards Demanded Withdrawal to be Determined by Official Dispatches.

(By United Press.)

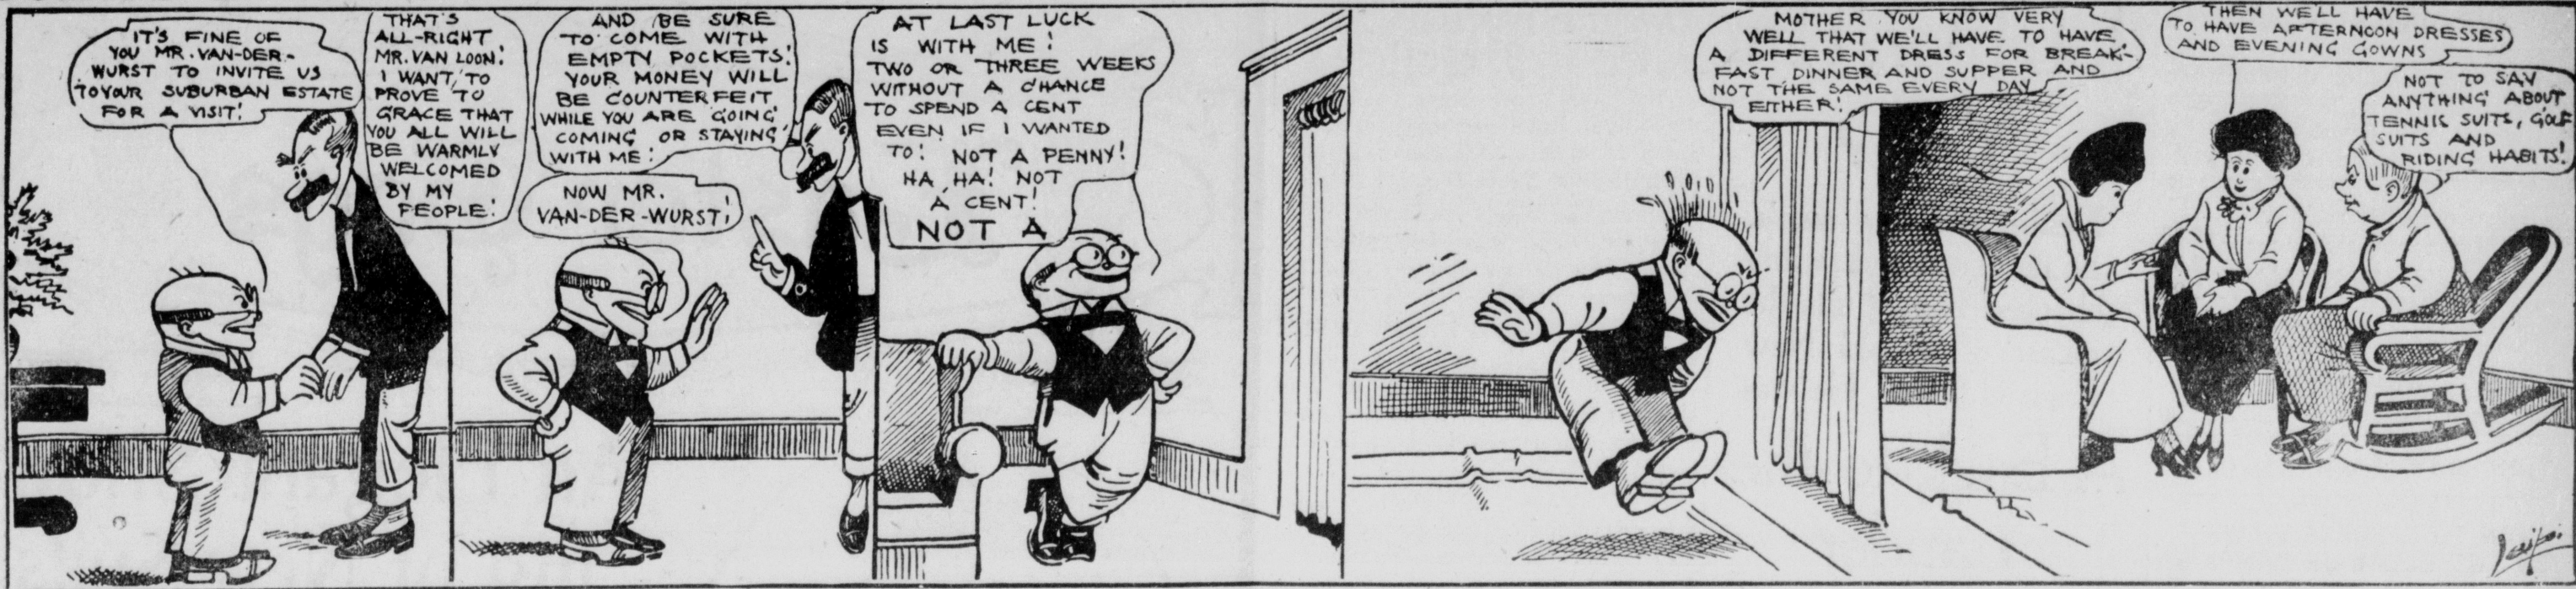

San Antonio, Tex., April 13—Major-General Funston will never consider the punitive expedition a military success until Villa is captured or killed. He made this clear today when shown United Press dispatches of Carranza's demands that the American forces be withdrawn. Funston said his attitude will be governed by the official dispatches.

LOVE FOR GIRL SAID TO HAVE BEEN THE CAUSE OF SUICIDE

Indianapolis Man Reported to Have Been Infatuated With Former Seymour Girl.

The Indianapolis Star says: Just a few minutes after he called his sweetheart, Miss Lucile A. Haskett, 20 years old, 728 North Delaware street, over the telephone, Aaron Fisher, 18 years old, of Bradwell, Ky., committed suicide yesterday by drinking poison. The young man had been in Indianapolis a short time and was living with his uncle, Brodehurst Elsey, in the Bronx Flats, 1335 Central avenue. A note which the young man is said to have left could not be found by Coroner Poole when he made an investigation.

Miss Haskett, whose home is in Seymour, Ind., could give no reason for Fisher's act. She asserted that Fisher telephoned to her and asked her to go to the Bronx Flats, as he wanted to see her. This request was unusual, she said. They had had no trouble, she declared, and nothing was said during the conversation that would indicate that he intended to take his life.

Elsey, who is in New York, is a part owner in the Indianapolis Glove Company. Miss Haskett said she was a stenographer at the glove company's plant when Fisher went to work there. About two weeks ago the young man decided to get a better education and gave up his position. He was being given aid by his uncle, it was said, and was attending the Central Business College.

Dr. Poole's explanation of the suicide was that the young man was in a love tangle. A letter from a girl named Ala, postmarked Bradwell, Ky., April 10, was found in Fisher's pocket. The substance of the letter was that she was to be married within a month to a man she did not love and that her true love was Fisher.

A maid at the Elsey flat said that Fisher came home from school yesterday morning and borrowed 25 cents from her. He left the house and shortly returned and went to his room. When she heard him call she went to his room, she said, and he exclaimed, "It's all over," and handed her a piece of paper.

Fisher died before a physician arrived. Charles F. Zwick, president of the Indianapolis Glove Company, was one of the first to arrive after the young man's death, but left before Coroner Poole came. While a search was being made for the piece of paper referred to by the maid, Zwick returned and turned the bottle over to Dr. Poole. He said that Fisher did not leave a note.

The body was removed to an undertaking establishment and will be sent to Bradwell for burial.

SCHOOL HEADS BLAME MOTHERS

Say Parents Neglect Primary Health Rules.

That many school children are being allowed to become chronically constipated through parent oversight, is a startling fact brought to light by recent investigation by school authorities. Hastily snatched meals so that there will be more time to play, the use of ready-to-eat cereals, and the general neglect of the call of nature are given as principal causes.

It is the duty of mothers to see that children attend to the call of nature before going to school.

However, a laxative is sometimes needed, and this should be the old reliable, healing, natural vegetable treatment for constipation—castor oil—the only remedy that doesn't form a habit.

In the new jellyed form known as CASTOR-JELL it is easy to take. CASTOR-JELL is simply 94 per cent pure castor oil, whipped into jellyed form and with a delicious orange flavor added. On sale at H. H. Carter Drug Co. The Castor Products Co., Cleveland, O.

DEMOCRATS EXPECTED TO GIVE SUPPORT TO WILSON

Party Leaders to Hear "Harmony" Address at Annual Jeffersonian Banquet.

By United Press.

New York, April 13.—Democrats representing different factions are expected to pledge their support to the policies of President Wilson at the annual Jeffersonian dinner given to-night at the Waldorf-Astoria by the National Democratic club.

The dinner, characterized in the announcement as a "harmony feast," will have among its chief guests Attorney General Thomas W. Gregory, Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, and Senator James D. Phelan, of California. They and other leaders of the party will deliver speeches. The committee in charge of the arrangements includes John W. Keller, chairman; Thomas E. Rush, Surveyor of the Port; Stuart G. Gibboney; Thomas G. Smith, Secretary of Tammany Hall; Henry M. Oldfogel, formerly representative in Congress; William A. Clark, one-time United States Senator from Montana.

ADOPT ANTI-LYNCHING PLANK

Georgia Republicans Chose Delegates to Chicago Convention.

Macon, Ga., April 13.—An anti-lynching plank was written into the Republican platform adopted by the state convention. It demands that the state pay to the family of a person lynched $10,000 and that the sheriff in the county where the lynching occurs be ineligible for re-election.

Four delegates and four alternates were elected here to the Chicago convention, the delegation being headed by Colonel W. H. Johnson of Columbus, who for thirty-six years has been a Republican in Georgia.

Woman Is Pardoned.

Trenton, N. J., April 13.—Anna Valentine, the last woman sentenced to be hanged in New Jersey, was paroled by the court of pardons. She had served almost ten years of a life term to which the death penalty had been commuted on the very eve of the day set for her execution.

Splendid for Rheumatism.

"I think Chamberlain's Liniment is just splendid for rheumatism," writes Mrs. Dunburgh, Eldridge, N. Y. "It has been used by myself and other members of my family time and time again during the past six years and has always given the best of satisfaction." The quick relief from pain which Chamberlain's Liniment affords is alone worth many times the cost. Obtainable everywhere.

BUSINESS IS BASED ON CONFIDENCE

A Theory Put Into Practice by Well Known Business Man

J. C. BRADY

"A druggist has many opportunities to make lasting friends of his customers," said Mr. J. C. Brady, popular Rexall Pharmacist of Fall River, Mass. "The very nature of his business draws their confidence for little helpful suggestions on the matter of health. Many people have thanked me for recommending Rexall Orderlies as the best relief for constipation and its resultant ills. Put up in dainty candy tablet form, they are pleasant to the taste and make an ideal laxative for the home—for men, women and children alike."

We have the exclusive selling rights for this great laxative.

CARTER'S DRUG STORE THE REXALL STORE

Boring and Building
Talk about yourself and you are a bore, advertise and you are listened to.
There is a curious law of human nature back of this. Talk is cheap. Advertising costs definite dollars and people know it. They take it that you would not spend your money unless you had something to say. They regard advertising as matter of direct interest to them. They read it and they buy advertised goods and patronize stores that advertise. The daily newspaper is the great advertising message bearer.

Field Telegraph Working 120 Miles.
Washington, April 13.—Brigadier-General Scriven, chief of the signal corps, said that the field telegraph buzzer now was working regularly from Columbus to Casas Grandes, 120 miles, and that more than 9,000 words of dispatches were handled.

Ten Horses Burn to Death.

Crawfordsville, Ind., April 13.—Ten horses were burned to death when the large barn of David Myers, near Waynetown, was destroyed. The origin of the fire is a mystery. The loss is $4,000.

VEGETABLE CALOMEL

Vegetable calomel, extract of the root of the old-fashioned may-apple plant, does not salivate. As a liver stimulant, it's great. It's a perfect substitute for ordinary calomel (mercury); in fact, it's better, because its action is gentle instead of severe and irritating—and it leaves no mean, disagreeable after-effects. Physicians recognize this and prescribe may-apple root (podoophyllin, they call it) daily.

Combined with four other standard, all-vegetable remedies, may-apple root may now be had at most any druggist's in convenient sugar-coated tablet form by asking for Santal Laxatives. If you forget the name, ask for the box that has the picture of the soldier on it. These tablets are small, easy to take and are really wonderful little performers.

They quickly clean out the poisons that are causing you headache, constipation, sour stomach, biliousness, dizzy spells, bad breath and coated tongue.

They are mild. They never gripe. And they are a bowel tonic as well as a cleanser and liver regulator. A 10c box should last one several weeks. A Physician's trial package (4 doses) will be mailed you free if you write mentioning this advertisement. The Santal Remedies Co., 802 Madison Ave., Covington, Ky.

WOMEN TO EXPRESS VIEWS ON THE CLEAN-UP CAMPAIGN

Special Session of the Council to be Held This Afternoon—Week to be Observed May 1-6.

A special meeting of the city council was to be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon to which representatives of the various women's clubs in the city were invited to discuss plans for the annual clean-up and paint-up campaign, May 1-6. The meeting was called at the suggestion of Mayor Ross. The ladies of the city are enthusiastic over the movement and are showing greater interest this spring than ever before. Practically all the clubs have appointed committees to co-operate with the council.

The purpose of the meeting this afternoon was to hear suggestions and recommendations. The ladies are insistent that an inspection be ordered after the close of the special week. It is believed that this will urge all residents to participate in the movement. The prospects for a general campaign throughout the city are excellent and the council believes that the results will be very gratifying.

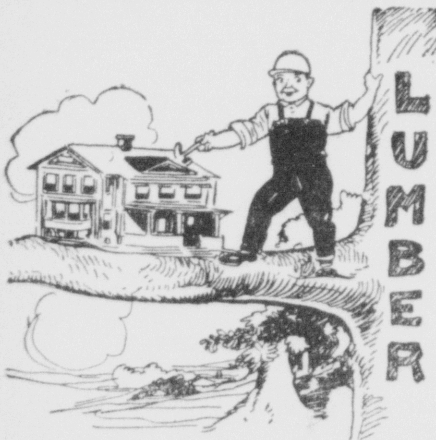

TOWN GREET'S COUPLE.

Cornet Band Serenades Bridegroom, Eighty, and Bride, Thirty-nine. Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—All Staatsburg turned out and, headed by the village cornet band, serenaded Timothy Herrick, eighty, who returned from a visit to Syracuse, bringing with him his bride, formerly Miss Martha Wallace, thirty-nine, a schoolteacher of that city.

Herrick, who for fifty years has been superintendent on the William B. Dinsmore estate, recently refurbished his cottage. Nothing was thought of this, however, until his arrival with the bride.

Herrick has six children, all married. His first wife died four years ago.

on the northwest corner of Fourth street and Indianapolis Avenue, on which is now located the handsome home of Miss Nellie Jonas.

Henry B. Woods was the first merchant, and was located in a building on the lot now occupied by the Steele hotel.

The next business house was built by Meedy Shields, and was situated on the lot on Indianapolis Avenue, between the B. & O. S-W. and Second street now occupied by a bulletin board.

B. F. Price and brother later erected a building and started a drug store on the lot adjoining the Shields' store.

John Reddinger erected a building on the opposite side of the street, on the lot now occupied by what is known as the Phil Meech building. Mr. Reddinger occupied the building as a residence and shoe shop.

Mr. Shields built a saw-mill on the ground on Third street now occupied by the Hill garage, immediately north of the Hustedt furniture store. This mill, under the management of the late Stephen Adams, furnished the lumber from which most of the buildings were erected here.

L. B. Osborn started the first tan yard here. It was located on the lots on which the new postoffice building is being erected. Mr. Osborn was the first justice of the peace here.

Dr. J. Hagin was the second doctor to locate here.

Despite the fact that little work had been done on the O. & M. railroad during the year 1853, Seymour became quite a little village.

In that year Thomas L. Gibson located here and opened a store. He purchased the premises on Ewing street now occupied by his two children. His wife, Mrs. Eliza Gibson, was a highly educated woman, having acted as associate editor of the Indiana School Journal for several years. Shortly after Mr. Gibson moved to the village, the residents, few in number, began to talk of a school, and Mrs. Gibson was solicited to take up the proposition.

After carefully considering the matter she finally decided to do so. As there was no building that could be used for the purpose, she used one of the rooms in her residence. The building is still standing and no great changes have been made in the structure.

There were but few children of school age in the village at that time so the little 12x20 room was of ample capacity to hold them.

In one of the roll books we find the names of the following families who had their children in attendance: Conrad Haub; Wm. Smith; John Jacob Frey; Thomas McCollum; John Burk; Steven Adams; John Sparks; Michael Burkart; Travis Carter; Thos. L. Ewing; Valentine Vogel; C. C. Frey; Enoch Harrison; John Jonas; John Reddinger; C. C. Ball and Dr. J. L. Ford.

Several of the above named families are still represented in this city. Conrad Haub conducted a tinshop. John Jacob Frey's daughter, Miss Sarah, is teaching school.

Frank Adams, the North Ewing street grocer, is a son of Stephen Adams.

Michael Burkart, was one of the first wagon-makers in this city, his shop being located on Second street on the lots adjoining the Traction station. Joseph his son, was a pupil. Joseph was the father of C. W. Burkart, the present city clerk.

Travis Carter was the founder of the Carter Planing Mill Co.

Thos. L. Ewing conducted one of the first stores here. Valentine Vogel was a prominent farmer just south of the city.

Christian C. Frey was a jolly old German business man. His son William is now a prominent railway official. A daughter, Mrs. Wm. Peter is well known in local society circles.

John Jonas erected the Hotel Jonas, the building now occupied by the B. & O. S-W. offices.

John Reddinger conducted the first shoe repair shop in the city. His son John, Jr., is the well known gardener.

C. C. Ball conducted the first tombstone shop here.

Dr. Emil Ford was one of the first physicians to locate here. His daughter, Mrs. Sarah Reno still resides here, and often visits the old school room.

Later as the city grew larger, it was found necessary to increase the facilities for taking care of the pupils.

An old wagon shop on Indianapolis Avenue, on the lot adjoining the Nazarene church was secured temporarily and a teacher employed.

Immediately arrangements were made for the erection of a large public school building.

The building was located on North Ewing street between Fifth and Sixth streets. At that time the lot on which the building was placed

STEINWEDEL The Men's Store

was on a very high hill.

The building was a two-story, three room brick structure, two rooms downstairs and one up-stairs.

Later it was necessary to secure more room, and a building at the corner of Second and Vine streets, known as Griffith's Hall, was added to the list. The city continued to grow and it soon became necessary to further increase the school facilities.

The town board and the citizens got together and decided to construct a large building on North Walnut street, on a plot of ground donated for the purpose by Meedy W. Shields, founder of the city.

Since that time many new buildings have been erected for the benefit of the pupils and now Seymour has a fine brick school building in each ward and one of the finest high school buildings in southern Indiana.

The writer attended school in the North Ewing street building and well remembers the great pond on Fifth street where the boys and girls enjoyed skating.

At that time Uncle Travis Carter conducted a wool carding mill, on the corner of Sixth and Ewing. His son, John, attended the school and his great friend "Ring," a large gray and white dog, accompanied him to school. The dog was a great friend of all the pupils, and delighted in taking an active part in their sports.

When skating was good every boy brought his skates with him, and at recess they would enjoy themselves on the pond just south of the school grounds.

They would form in line, catching hold of each others coats and the leader would catch hold of Ring's tail, and the animal would start on his journey over the pond pulling the boys after him.

Poor old Ring, May he rest in peace, as he so richly deserves.

WALKS 4,000 MILES TO REGAIN HIS HEALTH

When Doctors Seem to Be Giving Up Hope He Handles Own Case and Resorts to Walking.

Davenport, Ia.—Robert Sindt, thirty-five years old, was facing a physical breakdown last fall. The doctors did not hold out much hope for him. He is a pretty good sized man when in robust health, but his weight had dropped to 135 pounds.

"I'll doctor my own case and fresh air will be my first prescription," decided Sindt.

So he started walking. Not to any destination in particular, but just jogging along as far as he felt like going every day. He started to walk in August. Recently he arrived at San Diego, Cal., having walked 3,384 miles in that time.

His prescription of fresh air, along with the accompanying exercise, has worked wonders, and his weight has gone up fifteen pounds. It's all solid bone and muscle, too, now.

Sindt has become a devotee of walking and has started out on a new trip to Washington. He pays his own way and adopts none of the minor grafts usually employed by professional pedestrians.

While on his long jaunt Sindt made a study of the effects of various foods, and he has arrived at the conclusion that the old fashioned staple—beans—just about tops the list in the way of affording nutriment. He drinks a great deal of water every day. He sleeps in the open air most of the time.

Sindt has averaged 15.73 miles every day since he started on his health pilgrimage.

Woman Longs For the Cabin in Maryland Mountains Instead of a City Home.

Frederick, Md.—"I want to go back to my home in the mountains to live. There I can be more alone than any place I know. I want to take my children up there and be alone with them in the woods."

This is the expressed desire of Mrs. Eloise Young English, who recently in this same mountain cabin shot and killed her husband to protect herself and their children from his anger.

"There are a lot of chickens up there, and the property is big," she said as if to convince herself that her plan was practicable. "I believe that I could get along very nicely though I do not expect to be happy again. I have never had a ray of sunshine since I married, and I surely do not hope for any now."

That Mrs. English has been completely exonerated from blame is shown in the attitude of Thomas Dunn English, the only son of the dead man by a former wife. Mr. English has offered to take his stepmother back to his own home in Brooklyn.

"Dunn has been awfully nice to me," said Mrs. English. "He begged me to go to New York to live with him. But I don't want to go. I appreciate his offer, but I don't want to be under obligations to anybody."

"If it had been only myself I would not have shot Arthur. When he wanted to be he could be as nice as anybody could wish. But there were so many times that his temper would snap in an instant, and I was afraid of him. I knew at these moments he was perfectly capable of killing my children."

HEROISM WINS BRIDE.

Weds Miss After Giving Skin For Grafting Upon Little Girl.

Denver.—A romance, like those you read about in novels, culminated recently when Miss Lellah Alma Peck, a nurse at the County hospital, formerly of Madison, Ind., was married to Vincent Brunner, Jr., of Mishawaka, Ind.

Several months ago Brunner read in an Indiana paper that little five-year-old Mary Lena Lewis, who was badly burned in a Colorado forest fire, needed healthy skin grafted on to her seared body. The appeal touched his heart, and he, being a healthy young man, came to Denver and gave a portion of his skin that the child might recover.

During the skin grafting operation he met Miss Peck, and the romance began.

Train Hits Their Auto Near Columbus and Hurls It Seventy-Five Feet.

Columbus, O., April 13.—Dr. Charles P. Gilliam, superintendent of the Columbus State Hospital for the Insane and Miss Elizabeth Somerville, social worker in the Columbus Tuberculosis hospital, were killed when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Pennsylvania train at Grandview crossing, west of this city.

The automobile was thrown seventy-five feet by the collision. Miss Somerville was caught beneath the machine and burned to death when the gasoline tank exploded. Dr. Gilliam suffered injuries about the head and body which caused his death a short time after the accident.

Bullet Taken From Heart.

Paris, April 13.—After carrying a ten-grain, one-third-ounce sharpshooter bullet in his heart for a year a French sergeant was operated on and is now in good health. The sergeant was wounded in the battle of the Marne. He was sent to a hospital in Nimes and apparently recovered. Grave heart trouble developed and a radio examination revealed a projectile lodged in the right ventricle. The bullet was extracted successfully and the heart sewed together.

The Noon Meal at Home With Special Reference to Children

(United States Department of Agriculture.)

There is no reason why the ordinary family dinner should not be suitable for school children or served in a way that adapts it to their needs, according to Farmers' Bulletin 712, "School Lunches," just issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The usual first course of meat and vegetables contains nothing except the meat, which cannot be given even to the youngest children. The vegetables, providing they are carefully prepared by simple methods, are specially needed and can often be made attractive to children by being served with a little meat gravy. As a substitute for the meat itself, milk can be provided in the case of the younger children. These articles, with the bread and butter, provide most of the food needed.

The dessert course is suitable for children as well as for grown people unless it consists of rich pastries or puddings. The latter are not considered wholesome for children, if for no other reason than that they are likely to lead to overeating. Such desserts as fruit, fresh or cooked, with cake; cereals with milk or cream and sugar; custards and custard puddings; gelatin dishes; simple ice cream; water ices, and other simple desserts may be given.

Whether or not the family meal is healthful for children depends not only on the food materials selected, but also on the way in which they are cooked. Simple methods are to be preferred from the standpoint of health as well as from that of the housekeeper's time. All dishes that are not likely to contain overheated and scorched fats, such as foods carelessly fried in a pan in a small amount of fat, should be avoided. Deep-fat frying is open to fewer objections, since, if properly done, foods will absorb little fat and the fat will not sear. Vegetables cooked in water or in their own juices and seasoned with salt and a little butter or cream are easier to prepare than those that are served with white sauce, scalloped, or cooked in other elaborate ways.

What is said above applies equally to all meals. There is, however, one special precaution that applies to the noon meal when it is hurried. This refers to tough, hard foods that are likely to escape proper mastication. It is a mistake to think that the foods given to children must always be soft or finely divided, for children's teeth need exercise quite as much as their muscles do. When time for eating is limited, however, it is well to omit foods that are difficult to chew, and in extreme cases it may be necessary to serve only soft or finely divided foods—sandwiches made from crustless bread with finely chopped fillings, for example. Before resorting to this, however, it is well to make sure that the time for eating and for insistence on good table manners is not unnecessarily cut short. The advantage of putting the meal on the table promptly and of having foods served in individual portions, or at least ready to eat when they are brought to the table, should be kept in mind. To have the meat already sliced and the dessert in cups instead of in one large dish from which individual portions must be served, and to follow the same general plan with other foods, may change a hurried meal into one at which there is plenty of time for attention to details essential to health and good manners.

If special lunches, different from those prepared for the family in general, are to be given to school children, the following are suggested as bills of fare. They are only typical and many others might be given which would be just as good. Suggested Bills of Fare for the Noon

MARGARET MASON'S FASHION LETTER

(Written for the United Press.)

New York, April 13.—Oh the flowers that bloom in the spring trail and the dresses that hook up the back are making a simultaneous debut.

Steadily and insidiously hooks and snaps and buttons are sneaking to the rear and in consequence the fingers of all poor Benedicts are due to turn to thumbs for the summer months and bear the brunt of many a pinch and scratch from an obstreperous hook or an obstinate button.

Although all their work is done behind your back there is nothing reticent or retiring about the buttons used to hold your apparel together in the rear.

In fact quite a feature is made of a necessity, and the buttons, though generally small, are of ornate shapes, designs and colorings. Quaint little round colored and white glass affairs they are.

Others enameled in bright hued plaids or wee little nosebags of bows, square and hexagon and oval shapes and other smart ones covered in the material of which the dress is made or in which it is trimmed.

Crochet buttons also are popular. Even if all the brass buttons have gone to the front it appears there are still divers and sundry other sorts to go to the rear.

With the full skirts and tight bodices and bell sleeves of the moment, the back fastening really fits into the general scheme of things most effectively and, while in some instances frocks may make a feature of buttoning straight down the front, you will find the very newest and smartest wrinkle is to do your buttoning up behind—or let George do it.

You must look to your feet this summer as assiduously as you have in the winter, for others surely will look there and looking once it is up to you whether they will care to look again.

The short full skirt, hinting of hoops and crinoline, are first aids to a generous display of silken hose and shoes of kid and a smartness.

All black stockings will be glimpsed but rarely but black with white will be on many a well turned limb and will occasion many a well turned head.

Black and white stripes running around for those as can wear 'em and running up and down for those as can't are very much in the running and range from pin stripes to inch wide bands.

White hose embroidered in black up the instep or the sides of the ankle are good and all delicate tints of flesh, grey, maize and baby blue will be popular.

The white kid shoe, both high and low, is in its heyday and low plain pumps and slippers of softest pearl grey kid, beige and all delicate pastel tints to go with the fluffy summer silks and organdies are to be featured on all the best feet.

Black patent kid and black satin slippers will be greatly in demand also, with light colored hosiery because of the pronounced panish flavor of our present dressing.

Take nine inches off a skirt and then add two cute (not cube) feet and the answer to this sartorial sum is SOME girl.

A set of rollers on the wash basket will save many unnecessary steps for the tired ironer. Blue Monday is blue enough for most women, and this little device will prove decidedly helpful to you.

FAVORITE RECIPES.

ROAST BEEF HEART.

One heart, one-quarter pound suet, six ounces bread crumbs, one-half cupful milk, two tablespoons finely chopped parsley, one tablespoon powdered mixed herbs, salt, pepper, paprika, one pint gravy. Wash the heart in salt water, taking care to remove all the blood; wash in a second water and dry with a clean cloth. Chop the suet, mix with it the bread crumbs, parsley, herbs, salt, pepper and paprika; then add the milk and fill all the cavities of the heart with stuffing. Grease a piece of white paper well, place this over the cavities and tie it on tightly with a string. Put one heaping tablespoon of dripping into a pan, put in the heart and allow it to roast for two hours, basting well. For the sauce, put one tablespoonful of butter into a sauce pan, stir in one tablespoon of flour. When blended together add gradually the gravy, allow it to boil, then add one onion finely chopped, a little salt, and pepper and a large spoonful of mushroom catsup. Cook for five minutes, pour the sauce over the heart and serve hot.

OYSTER ROLLS

Procure from three-quarters to one pound of rump steak (cut very thick) cut meat into thin slices and dip each slice in flour, which has been seasoned with salt and pepper. Roll in each slice of meat two large oysters which have been sprinkled with lemon juice and a little cayenne pepper. Skewer each roll with a small, thin wooden skewer (toothpick will do). Melt in a saucepan 1½ ounces of butter; when hot add prepared rolls and fry nicely; they will take about ten minutes at the most. Take up the fried rolls and arrange them on a plate. Pour off the fat in the pan; add a little stock, gravy or water and the liquor from the oysters; season to taste, boil up and strain it over the meat. Serve at once.

ORANGE FLOAT

One quart of water, juice and pulp of two lemons, five sweet, juicy oranges, four tablespoonful cornstarch, one cupful sugar. Put the water on to boil. Moisten cornstarch with a little cold water, then stir it into boiling water; cook slowly for ten minutes, stirring constantly. Take from the fire, add sugar, lemon juice and pulp. Cut the oranges into small pieces, remove the seeds, pour the boiling cornstarch over them and stand away to cool. Serve cold with sugar and cream.

CREAM OF PEANUT SOUP.

One quart of milk, one cupful peanut butter, one tablespoonful chopped celery, one teaspoonful onion juice, one-fourth teaspoonful pepper. Stir and cook until hot. Moisten one tablespoonful of corn starch in a quarter cupful of hot milk and add it to hot milk; stir until smooth and thick, then strain. Add half a teaspoonful of salt and serve with croutons.

Women Who Lead the Way

Miss M. E. Bingeman—A Modern Searcher for the Fountain of Youth.

(By Mary Dille.)

It is quite consistent with the age of beauty parlors that it should be a woman now who seeks the fountain of eternal youth. Miss M. E. Bingeman does not, however, seek it through the recognized methods of the day. She is the secretary and most active member of the "Live-a-Little-Longer" educational committee of Rochester, N. Y. A committee which is quite as alluring as its name.

Miss Bingeman does not actually contend that one may always be young, but she does insist that most people are old long before it is necessary, and that by far the greater number die long before they should. She has made her statements so positively that she has convinced the Rochester Association of Life Underwriters and they are notifying the public by means of circulars. It is good business policy for a life insurance company to keep its members living, and the organization has aided materially in spreading the teachings of Miss Bingeman. She has also enlisted the co-operation of the Ministerial Association of Rochester, the Chamber of Commerce, the Women's Industrial Union and hundreds of individuals.

Her method is to strike directly at the root of the health question. One doctor and one nurse have been employed to lecture in the school houses on subjects which are limited entirely to the subject of life conservation. The diseases that are preventable are discussed and the audience is told how they may be kept out of the home. How the body may be kept disease proof and its power of resistance may be developed to the highest pitch. The caring for children and the possibility of keeping them in perfect health is demonstrated. The sole object is to insure the retaining of health and life. The membership of the classes is comprised of women over eighteen years of age and the lectures are held every afternoon and evening. Branches will be started soon that will put the places of meeting within walking distance of every woman in Rochester.

Lectures that are fitted to a particular community will be given and every effort will be made to keep the courses practical. A mannikin is used to illustrate the courses in nursing. The classes will be held continuously and will later become a part of the public school educational system if present plans carry.

Miss Bingeman is seeking to make the Live-a-little-longer educational committee a national rather than civic movement. In this the life insurance companies are aiding materially. She spoke before the National Association of Life Insurance Presidents in New York a year ago and through the many companies represented endorsements of her work have been issued. The advertising of this move insured audiences in Rochester and inspired an interest in many other cities. Miss Bingeman expects to enlist the services of thousands of nurses and doctors in America within the coming few months.

ed; one pint boiled rice, one tablespoon butter, one tomato, one good sized onion, one teaspoon of salt. Add onions to rice with the tomato chopped, and salt. Wash peppers, stuff them in baking pan, covering bottom of pan with a little water to which add your butter. Bake this all in quick oven for about twenty minutes, basting three or four times.

CHOCOLATE BREAD PUDDING

Two cups bread crumbs, four cups scalded milk, two squares bitter chocolate, two-thirds cup sugar, two eggs, one teaspoon vanilla, one-fourth teaspoon of salt; have pudding dish greased; crumb the bread fine and press them down a little in a cup; scald the milk over boiling water and melt the chocolate in it; add crumbs, sugar, salt, eggs slightly beaten and vanilla; pour into pudding dish and bake slowly one hour.

LEMON SAUCE

Mix one-half cup of sugar and two teaspoons cornstarch; add one cup boiling water; boil for five minutes, remove from fire and add two teaspoons butter and one and one-half teaspoons lemon juice.

RICE WITH PIMENTOS

To a can of tomatoes add one teaspoon sugar, two teaspoons salt, one-fourth teaspoon of pepper, small onion chopped fine. Butter baking dish, spread layer of tomatoes in bottom of dish, then one of rice, and sprinkle with chopped pimentos. Dot with butter, repeat till dish is filled. Sprinkle top with bread crumbs mixed with a tablespoonful of butter, and bake in moderate oven about forty-five minutes. This will serve six persons.

SHIRT WAIST OF SILK CREPE

Crepe de chine is as well liked as sheer cotton fabrics for shirt waists. An up-to-date model is shown here, with high turn-over collar, long sleeves and small sprays of embroidery. It launders perfectly.

Novelties Presented by the Tailor

While in other departments of dress extremes of style and more or less eccentric fashions present themselves, the tailored costumer is conservative. The tailor in his work seems to cling to a happy medium, a middle-of-the-road course. He takes cognizance of the latest ideas as to form and outline, but refuses to be beguiled by the extravagance of crinoline effects and a tendency to over-trimming.

The cleverest tailors are showing both two and three-piece suits that are very conservative. The models extant over by French tailors depend upon cleverness of cut, correctness of lines, and perfection of workmanship for distinction. Perfect fit and finish contribute to their fine effect. They ignore fussiness.

American women are very partial to navy blue—"the gentlewoman's color," as the French term it. Therefore a large proportion of model gowns are made up in this becoming and serviceable shade. The majority are dark in color, but many of them are brightened by vests of brocaded or plaid silks.

A model that is interesting from several standpoints is shown in the picture. The fullness of the skirt, a concession of the season's mode, is appropriately disposed in plaits. The coat is cleverly cut and easy fitting, with peplum pointed at the sides and back, and laid in plaits to give it fullness.

The sleeves are plain, with deep, slightly flaring cuffs. A girdle extends across the front and back, but is lacking at the sides. It is finished with a bit of embroidery, which is repeated on the standing collar.

A vestee and high turnover collar of satin, with cuffs to match, may be made in plaid silk if more color is preferred. Or they might be of pique or organdie, since they are separate pieces.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Conference in the Castle.

A NUMBER of men were seated about a long table in the center of this imposing chamber. No one arose as Mr. Blithers entered the room and stopped just inside the door. He was at a loss for the first time in his life. His gaze fell upon a huge oaken chair at the far end of the table. It was the only unoccupied seat that came within the scope of his rather limited vision. Was it possible that the big chair was intended for him? If so, how small and insignificant he would look upon it.

After what appeared to him to be an interminable length of time, but in reality no more than a few seconds, a tall man arose from his seat and advanced with outstretched hand. Mr. Blithers recognized Count Quinnox, the minister of war. He shook that friendly hand with a fervor that must have surprised the count. Never in all his life had he been so glad to see any one.

"Let me introduce you to my colleagues, Mr. Blithers," said the count. "Happy, I'm sure," mumbled Mr. Blithers. To save his life he couldn't tell what had got into him. He had never acted like this before.

No one offered to shake hands with him, although each rose politely, even graciously. They even smiled. He remembered that very well afterward. He suddenly realized what had got into him. It was respect.

"A chair, Franz," said the white haired, gaunt man who was called Baron Romano. "Will you sit here, Mr. Blithers?"

Mr. Blithers sat down. He was rather pleased to find that the big chair was not meant for him. A swift intuition told him that it was reserved for the country's ruler.

"The prince signed the contracts just before you arrived, Mr. Blithers," said Baron Romano. "The seal has been affixed to each of the documents, and your copy is ready for delivery at any time."

Mr. Blithers recovered himself slightly. "You may send it to the hotel, baron, at any time tomorrow. My lawyers will have a look at it." Then he made haste to explain: "Not that it is really necessary, but just as a matter of form." He sent an investigating glance around the room.

"The prince has retired," said the baron, divining the thought. "He does not remain for the discussions." Glancing at the huge old clock above the door, the prime minister assumed a most businesslike air. "It will doubtless gratify you to know that three-fourths of the bonds have been deposited, Mr. Blithers, and the remainder will be gathered in during the week. A week will give them sufficient time, will it not, Count Lazzar?"

"I may safely say that all the bonds will be in our hands by next Tuesday at the latest," said the minister of the treasury. He was a thin, ascetic man; his keen eyes were fixed rather steadily upon Mr. Blithers. After a moment's pause he went on:

Join Our Aluminum Club

With our Aluminum Club drawing to a close we find that there are only a few 7-piece Sets of DIAMOND BRAND ALUMINUM left. This is because housewives have been quick to take advantage of the manufacturer's liberal offer permitting us to distribute a limited number of these 7-piece Sets on the

Easy Club Terms

As stated in our former announcement, $1.00 cash and 50 cts. a week for a 7-piece Set of High Grade Aluminum will hold good until the few remaining sets have been taken, then our Club will be closed and you will certainly regret it if you pass up this offer.

This space is too small to picture the complete set, therefore it will pay you to call early and inspect the utensils that we are offering on our Diamond Brand Aluminum Club.

"We are naturally interested in your extensive purchases of our outstanding bonds, Mr. Blithers. I refer to the big blocks you have acquired in London, Paris and Berlin."

"Well, investment, that's all. Your credit is sound and your resources unquestioned, your bonds gilt edge."

"It is most gratifying to Graustark to know that you value our securities so highly as a legacy," said Count Lazzar suavely. "May I venture the hope, however, that your life may be prolonged beyond the term of their existence? They expire in a very few years—a dozen, in fact."

"Oh, I think I can hang on that long," said Mr. Blithers, a little more at ease. He was saying to himself that these fellows were not so bad after all. "Still one never knows. I may be dead in a year. My daughter—but, of course, you will pardon me if I don't go into my private affairs. I fear I have already said too much."

"On the contrary, sir, we are all only too willing to be edified. The workings of an intelligence such as yours cannot fail to be of interest to us who are so lacking in the power to cope with great undertakings."

"I am only too willing, my lords, to give you the benefit of my experience."

The prime minister tapped reflectively upon the table top with his fingers for a moment or two.

"Thank you," he said. "We are at this very moment in something of a quandary in respect to the renewal of a treaty with one of our neighbors. For the past twenty years we have been in alliance with our next door neighbors, Axphain on the north and Dawsbergen on the south and east. The triple alliance will end this year unless renewed. Up to the present our relations have been most amiable. Axphain stands ready to extend our mutual protective agreement for another term of years, but Dawsbergen is lukewarm and inclined to withdraw."

"What's the grievance?" inquired Mr. Blithers bluntly. He was edging into familiar waters now. "What's the matter with Dawsbergen? Money controversy?"

"Not at all," said Lazzar hastily. "Why not let 'em withdraw?" said Mr. Blithers. "We can get along without them."

There was a general uplifting of heads at the use of the pronoun and a more fixed concentration of gaze.

The baron leaned forward, still tapping the table top with his long, slim fingers.

"The report that Prince Robin is to marry your daughter, Mr. Blithers, has reached the Prince of Dawsbergen's ears. It is only natural that he should feel resentful. For fifteen years there has been an understanding that the Crown Princess of Dawsbergen and the Prince of Graustark were one day to be wedded to each other."

Mr. Blithers settled back in his chair. "It seems to me that he is making a mountain out of a molehill."

Baron Romano shrank perceptibly. "It devolves upon me, sir, as spokesman for the ministry, the court and the people of Graustark, to inform you that marriage between our prince and any other than the Crown Princess of Dawsbergen is not to be considered as possible."

"My lords," said Mr. Blithers, rising, his face suddenly pale, "I beg leave to assure you that my daughter's happiness is of far more importance to me than all the one horse principalities in the world. I do not resent your attitude, nor do I resent your haste in conveying to me your views on the subject. It may be diplomacy to go straight to a question and get it over with, but it isn't always diplomacy to go off half cocked. I will say with perfect candor that I should like to see my daughter the Princess of Graustark, but, by gad, I want you to understand that her own wishes in the matter are to govern mine in the end. I want to say to you now, all of you, that if my girl should love your prince and he should love her in return, there isn't a power below heaven that can keep them apart. If she doesn't love him, and he should be unlucky enough to love her, I'd see him hanged before he could have her. I intend to leave this matter entirely to my daughter and Prince Robin. They are to do the deciding, so far as I am concerned. And if they decide that they love each other and want to get married, they will get married. Do I make myself perfectly plain, my lords?"

The dignified ministry of Graustark sat agape.

Baron Romano arose. "You place us in the extremely distressing position of being obliged to oppose the hand of a benefactor, Mr. Blithers. You have come to our assistance in a time of need. You have"—

"If it is the loan you are talking about, baron, that is quite beside the question," interrupted Mr. Blithers. "I do not speculate. I have made a satisfactory loan, and I am not complaining."

"As you please, sir," said Romano coldly. "I may at least question your right to assume that we are powerless to prevent a marriage that is manifestly unpopular with the subjects of Prince Robin."

"But what about the personal views of Prince Robin? If I am not mistaken he openly declares that he will marry to suit himself and not the people of Graustark. Am I not right, Count Quinnox?" demanded Mr. Blithers suddenly of the minister of war.

"You are in a position to know something about him. Am I not right?"

Every eye was on the count. "Prince Robin will marry for love, my lords," he said quietly. "I am forced to agree with Mr. Blithers."

Baron Romano sank into his chair. There was silence in the room for many seconds.

A gleam of triumph shot into the eyes of Mr. Blithers.

"My lords, I find that my half hour is almost up," he said, pulling out his gold watch and comparing its time with that of the clock on the wall. "Permit me to take my departure. I am content to let matters shape themselves as they may. Allow me, however, before leaving to assure you of my most kindly interest in the welfare of your state. You may be pleased to know that it is not from me that Graustark—did I get it right that time?—will redeem her bonds when they mature, but from my only daughter. She is nearly twenty-one years of age. On her twenty-fifth birthday I shall present to her—as a gift—all of my holdings in Graustark. She may do as she sees fit with them. Permit me to wish you all good day, my lords."

At the Regent's a telegram awaited him. It was from Maud.

"I shall be in Edelweiss this week without fail. I have something very important to tell you." So it read.

Nine o'clock of a rainy night, on the steep, winding road that climbed the mountain side from the walled in city to the crest on which stood the famed monastery of St. Valentine—9 o'clock of a night fraught with pleasurable anticipation on the part of one R. Schmidt, whose eager progress up the slope was all too slow notwithstanding the encouragement offered by the conscienceless Jehu, who frequently beat his poor steeds into a gallop over level stretches and never allowed them to pause.

Late in the afternoon there had come to the general postoffice a letter for Mr. R. Schmidt.

Her letter was brief. She merely acquainted him with the fact that she had arrived in Edelweiss that day from Ganlook, twenty miles away, and was stopping at the Inn of the Stars, outside the city gates.

In closing she said that she would be delighted to see him when it was convenient for him to come to her. On receipt of this singularly matter of fact letter he promptly dispatched a message to Miss Guile, Inn of the Stars, saying that she might expect him at 9 that night.

Stealing away from the castle at night, he entered the ramshackle cab that Hobbs had engaged for the expedition and which awaited him not far from the private entrance to the park.

The Dignified Ministry of Graustark Sat Agape.

The mud covered vehicle was nearing the Inn of the Stars when Robin stuck his head out of the window and directed Hobbs to drive slower.

"Whoa!" said Hobbs suddenly.

"Ello, wot the 'ell is'—"

A dark figure had sprung into the roadway near the horses' heads and was holding up a warning hand.

Robin's head came through the window.

"It is I, m'sieur," said the voice of Marie, Miss Guile's French maid.

Disappointment filled his soul.

"What has happened?" he cried, grasping the girl's arm. "Has she changed her mind?"

"Yes, m'sieur. She will not receive you at the Inn of the Stars. She bids you to drive to the end of this street, where there is a garden with a Magyar band and the most delicious refreshments to be had under vine covered"—

"A public garden?" exclaimed Robin in utter dismay.

"P'ngari's, sir," said Hobbs. "I know the place well. It is a very quiet, orderly place."

"I am not accustomed to meeting people in public gardens. I"—

"Nor is my mistress, m'sieur. I assure you. May I put a flea in m'sieur's ear? The place is quite empty to-night, and besides there is the drive back to the inn with mademoiselle. Is not that something, m'sieur?"

"By jove!" exclaimed Robin. "Drive on, Hobbs!"

The funeral party that accompanied the body of the late A. P. Williams to Little York, where the burial took place were: The widow, Mr. and Mrs. Ash Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Williams and Mrs. Bessie Dawquest. Quite a large party met the body at Scottsburg.

The case against Francis Dinsmore was dismissed yesterday when his wife, Viola Dinsmore, failed to appear against him. It is reported that she maintained that a night in the lock-up was sufficient punishment for the offense with which she charged her husband.

Ivor Collins, aged fourteen, and Carl Niehaus, aged sixteen, were brought before the police last night charged with rifling the cash register at Hoadley's grocery store, South Chestnut street. The boys told the police they entered through the front door by means of a key which fit the lock. The entrance was gained about 10 o'clock, according to the story told the police. About $5, the amount missing, was found on the boys. They were charged with petit larceny and their cases will come before Judge Swails.

Franklin's Public Library.

Benjamin Franklin's influence on the book-reading public of his day and after is hinted in the following passages from his autobiography. He says:

"At the time I establish'd myself in Pennsylvania, there was not a good book-seller's shop in any of the colonies to the southward of Boston. In New York and Philad'a the printers were indeed stationers; they sold only paper, etc., almanacs, ballads, and a few common school-books. Those who lov'd reading were oblig'd to send for their books from England; the members of the Junto had each a few. We had left the house, where we first met, and hired a room to hold our club in. I propos'd that we should all of us bring our books to that room, where they would not only be ready to consult in our conferences, but become a common benefit, each of us being at liberty to borrow such as he wish'd to read at home. This was accordingly done, and for some time contented us.

"Finding the advantage of this little collection, I propos'd to render the benefit from books more common, by commencing a public subscription library. I drew a sketch of the plan and rules that would be necessary, and got a skilful conveyancer, Mr. Charles Brockden, to put the whole in form of articles of agreement to be subscribed, by which each subscriber engag'd to pay a certain sum down for the first purchase of books, and an annual contribution for increasing them. So few were the readers at that time in Philadelphia, and the majority of us so poor, that I was not able, with great industry, to find more than fifty persons, mostly young tradesmen, willing to pay down for this purpose forty shillings each, and ten shillings per annum. On this little fund we began. The books were imported; the library was opened one day in the week for lending to the subscribers, on their promissory notes to pay double the value if not duly returned. The institution soon manifested its utility, was imitated by other towns, and in other provinces. The libraries were augmented by donations; reading became fashionable; and our people, having no public amusements to divert their attention from study, became better acquainted with books, and in a few years were observed by strangers to be better instructed and more intelligent than people of the same rank generally are in other countries."

When asked about the complaints which have been filed against his methods, the chief collector said that each account had been verified and that if any of the parties visited desired to fight the county, that would be a matter for them to decide.
